

LIVES AT WALDORF ON A DOLLAR A DAY

Doctor Horace Fletcher of Yale
Makes Interesting Experiment.

RECOMMENDS CLUB SANDWICH

On This Dish and Oatmeal He Claims to Be Able to Satisfy
His Well-Trained and Regulated Stomach.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
New York, Dec. 25.—Doctor Horace Fletcher of Yale University, who since 1885 has devoted particular attention to scientific research in chemical physiology and human nutrition, is living at the Waldorfs on $1 a day. "And that is too much," says Mr. Fletcher, "but it is worth the experiment."

Mr. Fletcher ordinarily lives on about 20 cents a day at New Haven, but he thinks it is worth paying 50 cents extra to be able to say that he has boarded at such a famous hotel on such a moderate sum.

"I have all I want here," said he, "and never average more than a dollar. Some days my stomach demands $1.10, but the next day it is sure to go down to at least 90 cents. I have known my stomach to ask for only 50 cents, even at this expensive table."

"That may sound strange to you, to thus speak of my stomach as demanding, but the secret of my system is that my stomach has perfect control of me, and yet, paradoxical as it may sound, I have almost perfect control of my stomach."

This has come about through years of practice. My stomach tells me what to eat, and my brain tells my stomach how much.

"The two influences, you see, have through years of discipline—the psychological conditions, I admit, are complicated—made my appetite and my desire almost one."

"Here at the Waldorfs my appetite has been reasonably regular. I have had oatmeal and cream for breakfast almost every day, usually the same, and a club sandwich and a cup of chocolate."

This has cost almost exactly $1, and I've not had the slightest desire for anything more."

"It is easy from a critical dietetic standpoint to explain this requirement of my stomach. The amount, as I said before, has been controlled by a mental restraint. I know that I am eating what I want, and I eat it with pleasure."

Of the virtues of club sandwich.

"The club sandwich is a peculiarly well-rounded dinner, with chocolate, which, as every one knows, is one of the most nourishing liquids. Indeed, I could wish for nothing better. The toast I have of whole wheat bread—my stomach never calls for ordinary white bread. Then there are the stable acid and certain valuable salts in the lettuce and sliced tomato."

"The bacon has all the properties of meat and a sort of fat that is invaluable, and the chicken, which is the real drawing add to the palatable quality of the dish. I have the dressing specially prepared; it is not rich, like ordinary mayonnaise dressing, and the toast is not buttered."

"I would not advise this diet for everyone. I do not claim that all people would get the required nourishment from it, but on the other hand, I see no reason why they could not. The trouble with people nowadays is that their appetite has never been disciplined and merely runs riot with their food."

"I am 54 years old and have been working on this system the greater part of my life. Not a month ago I took the strength test at Yale College gymnasium, just to see what I was doing. The result was surprising. I beat some very famous athletes, and I believe my endurance test was above them all."

"One thing I have never done. That is to smoke or drink any intoxicating liquor. You can't rule your stomach if you are affected by it to unnatural influence. If you drink a glass of beer your stomach might, like a horse, ask for a whole barrel of it. It is no more responsible under stimulation than your stomach intoxicated as well as your head, and if you care to try this plan at all, you must first give up stimulants of all kinds. They are not meant to be taken in your stomach. Tobacco, alcohol, and all the harmful influence in any way, it is an unnatural influence on your digestive apparatus."

RUSSELL-ELLISON.
Mattoon, Ill., Dec. 25.—R. Russell of Arthur and Miss Jennie Ellison of this city were married this morning.

GUYETT-TUNZIE.
Mattoon, Ill., Dec. 25.—Mr. Albert Guyett and Miss Eugene McKinnis, both of this city, were married this morning.

AS OLD AS THE PYRAMIDS

That blood poison existed among the ancients has been proven beyond question. It has been traced back thousands of years, and is as old as the Pyramids. This blighting curse has been handed down from nation to nation and from individual to individual till it has spread to all parts of the world.

Contagious blood poison, as it is called in modern times, begins with a small sore or ulcer through which the virus enters the blood. This is followed by inflammation and swelling of the glands of the groins, a red eruption breaks out on the body, sores appear in the mouth and the throat becomes ulcerated, and as the disease takes a deeper hold and the blood becomes more thoroughly infected, the hair and eyebrows drop out, the skin is spotted with copper-colored blotches, the bones and muscles ache, and it seems to the victim of this monster scourge there is not a sound spot in the whole body.

The horror of this awful disease can never be told. The one who contracts it suffers in body and mind, and if the poison is not eradicated transmits the taint to his children, and Contagious Blood Poison thus becomes responsible for many of the ills of childhood—Skin Eruptions, Catarrhal Troubles, Sore Eyes, Scap Disease, White Swelling, Scrofula and others just as bad. S. S. S., the great vegetable blood purifier and tonic, has long been recognized as a radical and safe cure for Contagious Blood Poison. It counteracts the deadly virus and cleanses and purifies the diseased blood, and under its tonic effects the general health improves and soon all signs of blood poison are gone. The strong mineral remedies, Mercury and Potash, which are so often prescribed for the disease, dry up the sores, skin eruptions and all external signs, but leave the stomach and digestion ruined and the system in such condition that the disease usually returns in worse form than ever.

S. S. S. is guaranteed a purely vegetable remedy. $1.00 is offered for proof that it contains a single mineral ingredient. If you have blood poison write for our special book, describing the different stages and giving all directions for treating one's self at home. Our physicians will furnish any information or advice wanted for cure.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

NEGRO IN BARRICADED HOUSE DEFIES POLICE

Patrolman Peter Dolan Shot Three Times by David W. Ellington—Elmer Chambliss, Prisoner in His Charge, Dies From Bullet Wound—Refuses to Surrender Until He Sees Sergeant Lead Squad With Shotguns and Pistols—Threats of Lynching.

PATROLMAN PETER J. DOLAN

Who was shot from barricaded house by negro he was trying to arrest.

In the course of a fight between David W. Ellington, a negro, and five policemen whom he held at bay for two hours yesterday afternoon, after barricading himself in his house and keeping up a steady fire from his revolver, Patrolman Peter Dolan of the Mounted District, was shot three times and Elmer Chambliss, a negro prisoner in Dolan's charge, was killed.

There were threats of lynching when it became known that Patrolman Dolan had been wounded, but the police quieted the crowd and took Ellington to the station.

Ellington surrendered only after his house had been surrounded by police, some of them armed with shotguns, and the doors and windows had been splintered by bullets.

His niece, Mattie Gilland, 12 years old, was sent as a courier to tell the police that her uncle, Ellington, wished to surrender.

When Ellington appeared at the door to let the policemen arrest him, he held in his hand a revolver still containing three cartridges. He was covered by a double-barreled shotgun in the hands of Sergeant Con Bollard and made no attempt to fire.

Patrolman Peter Dolan, who was wounded early in the engagement, was removed to his home, No. 676 Manchester avenue. Doctor R. C. Blackmer of No. 676 Manchester avenue says he is not dangerous by hurt. One bullet entered the arm between the elbow and wrist, a second struck him in the upper arm and a third grazed his left side, inflicting only a slight abrasion.

Chambliss died in an ambulance on the way to the City Hospital. He was shot through the back.

The fight was precipitated by Ellington's attempt to kill Edward Ferguson of No. 676 Manchester avenue, and David Vertes of No. 665 Manchester avenue, at each of whom he fired a shot from a revolver.

When Patrolman Dolan and Sergeant McGrath heard the shots they had Chambliss in their custody, who had been arrested by their house.

"I am 54 years old and have been working on this system the greater part of my life. Not a month ago I took the strength test at Yale College gymnasium, just to see what I was doing. The result was surprising. I beat some very famous athletes, and I believe my endurance test was above them all."

"One thing I have never done. That is to smoke or drink any intoxicating liquor. You can't rule your stomach if you are affected by it to unnatural influence. If you drink a glass of beer your stomach might, like a horse, ask for a whole barrel of it. It is no more responsible under stimulation than your stomach intoxicated as well as your head, and if you care to try this plan at all, you must first give up stimulants of all kinds. They are not meant to be taken in your stomach. Tobacco, alcohol, and all the harmful influence in any way, it is an unnatural influence on your digestive apparatus."

RUSSELL-ELLISON.
Mattoon, Ill., Dec. 25.—R. Russell of Arthur and Miss Jennie Ellison of this city were married this morning.

GUYETT-TUNZIE.
Mattoon, Ill., Dec. 25.—Mr. Albert Guyett and Miss Eugene McKinnis, both of this city, were married this morning.

AS OLD AS THE PYRAMIDS

That blood poison existed among the ancients has been proven beyond question. It has been traced back thousands of years, and is as old as the Pyramids. This blighting curse has been handed down from nation to nation and from individual to individual till it has spread to all parts of the world.

Contagious blood poison, as it is called in modern times, begins with a small sore or ulcer through which the virus enters the blood. This is followed by inflammation and swelling of the glands of the groins, a red eruption breaks out on the body, sores appear in the mouth and the throat becomes ulcerated, and as the disease takes a deeper hold and the blood becomes more thoroughly infected, the hair and eyebrows drop out, the skin is spotted with copper-colored blotches, the bones and muscles ache, and it seems to the victim of this monster scourge there is not a sound spot in the whole body.

The horror of this awful disease can never be told. The one who contracts it suffers in body and mind, and if the poison is not eradicated transmits the taint to his children, and Contagious Blood Poison thus becomes responsible for many of the ills of childhood—Skin Eruptions, Catarrhal Troubles, Sore Eyes, Scap Disease, White Swelling, Scrofula and others just as bad. S. S. S., the great vegetable blood purifier and tonic, has long been recognized as a radical and safe cure for Contagious Blood Poison. It counteracts the deadly virus and cleanses and purifies the diseased blood, and under its tonic effects the general health improves and soon all signs of blood poison are gone. The strong mineral remedies, Mercury and Potash, which are so often prescribed for the disease, dry up the sores, skin eruptions and all external signs, but leave the stomach and digestion ruined and the system in such condition that the disease usually returns in worse form than ever.

S. S. S. is guaranteed a purely vegetable remedy. $1.00 is offered for proof that it contains a single mineral ingredient. If you have blood poison write for our special book, describing the different stages and giving all directions for treating one's self at home. Our physicians will furnish any information or advice wanted for cure.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

HAD ALL THE SYMPTOMS.

As a result of a serious blood disorder my blood became poisoned and I suffered severely with Rheumatism and other symptoms not necessary to mention. A friend of mine told me that he had been cured by S. S. S., and upon his recommendation I began its use. After using it for some time my blood was thoroughly cleansed and my symptoms disappeared. I am a great believer in S. S. S., and with pleasure commend it to all in need of a blood medicine.

ROBERT M. ZWITZIG.
589 Walnut St., Lebanon, Pa.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
Muncie, Ind., Dec. 25.—The largest eagle ever seen in Indian Territory was killed in the Cherokee Nation last week by Jack Cookson. It measured 8 feet 10 inches from tip to tip.

The eagle had lived in the recesses of Cookson Mountain for several years and its degradation had made it famous in that section. So many futile attempts had been made to kill the bird that the eagle was known as the "Cherokee Eagle."

Following a custom, when the eagle was killed he held an eagle dance. Young Cookson was the hero. He was first dressed in his clothing and given a pair of beaded moccasins, then buckskin leggings and a soft skin tunic were given, and over all a magnificent Indian blanket was thrown. The tall feathers were picked from the eagle and made in a circle around Cookson's head. He was placed in the middle of the Indians and the curious figures of the eagle dance.

MRS. PENALOZA TO ASK FOR DIVORCE

Will File Suit in Circuit Court
To-Day Alleging General
Indignities.

HUSBAND IS A FOREIGNER.

Requests Custody of the Two Children and Says It Is Impossible for Her to Live
With Him.

Mrs. Reine Fuz Penaloza of No. 464 McPherson avenue will to-day in the Circuit Court file suit for divorce from her husband, Henri Penaloza. The petition is based on the ground of general indignity of husband to wife.

The suit has been under advisement by Mrs. Penaloza for several weeks, and more than once she has been on the point of having her lawyers file the important papers, only to postpone action until her mind became more firmly set.

Mrs. Penaloza to a Republic representative said that she did not care to discuss the details of her grievances against her husband, but let it be understood that they were grave.

Penaloza is not now in St. Louis, having departed the first of the month for Mexico. Mrs. Penaloza accompanied him to the train and all was peace between them. Since then she states that she has learned of facts that make it impossible for her to further live with him, and upon these facts she bases her suit.

The plaintiff in the case to be, before her marriage, was Miss Reine Fuz. A prominent place in society was hers and she was noted as a beauty. She met Penaloza while she was a student in a convent of the Sacred Heart in Paris, France.

Their wedding took place six years ago last Thanksgiving Day in the New Cathedral, and was one of ceremony, and splendor. For two years after their marriage they lived in Paris.

When Dolan and Chambliss had been carried safely beyond range of Ellington's revolver, the latter returned to the guard at the house after requesting Patrolman Macklin to send a call for reinforcements from the Mounted District Station, more than a mile away.

On the arrival of Patrolman James Macklin, John Stone and Eugene O'Connor, in charge of Sergeant Con Bollard, the latter ordered his men to visit the houses of white residents near the scene and secure shotguns. Sergeant Bollard and Patrolman Macklin secured two shotguns, and with McGrath, O'Connor and Stone, they posted themselves at convenient points around Ellington's house, so that they might command the doors and windows.

FIRE AT INTERVALS.

The besieged negro continued firing at intervals, and believing that he would not willingly surrender, Sergeant Bollard was about to lead a charge against the front door. Armed with his shotgun, he advanced toward Ellington's house.

Afterwards acknowledged that realizing that the police were determined to kill him or kill him, he lost his nerve and sent his wife to ask for mercy.

While the fight lasted it is estimated that 120 rounds of ammunition were expended by the negro and his followers. A crowd of white persons and negroes gathered at a safe distance to watch the fight.

Chambliss lived at No. 116 North Twenty-first street.

ringed their home in Paris, and Penaloza says she has never been a happy one. They then returned to St. Louis. Penaloza engaged in the business of promoter, and his occupation kept him much of the time away from his home.

Mrs. Penaloza has two children, a boy and an infant girl, and one of the principal points of her suit will be for their possession and custody, and absolute control of them.

Comte de Penaloza, which is the title of the husband used in Europe, is the descendant of an ancient family. The title of nobility was given by the ancient Kings of Valencia, long before the kingdom of Spain was established. He was educated at Heidelberg and Vienna.

Besides being a promoter, he is said to be the author of many articles in the magazines and reviews of Europe.

MCCARTY MAY BE AUDITOR.

Minnesota Congressmen Say He Will Succeed Castle.

Washington, Dec. 25.—It is announced by Minnesota members of Congress that Joseph J. McCarty, formerly City Comptroller of St. Paul, practically has been named by the House to succeed Henry A. Castle in the office of Auditor for the Post-Office Department.

McCarty is a native of Minnesota, and on the strength of that fact, the Minnesota Senators and Representatives laid claim to the place.

Oregon Poultry Show Closes.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
Oregon, Mo., Dec. 25.—The annual exhibition by the Hot County Poultry Association will close here to-morrow. Judge C. H. Rhoads of Topeka is authority for the statement that it has been the largest and best barred Plymouth Rock display ever shown in the West.

There were over 300 specimens of this variety on show. The next exhibit will be held in Mount City, the second week in December, next year.

WANTED AT CINCINNATI.

Harry Edmund Is Arrested at Bayonne, N. J.

Bayonne, N. J., Dec. 25.—Harry Edmund and John Hoffman are under arrest here for burglary. As a result of a talk with Edmund, Chief of Police Warner commu-

Edmund, Chief of Police Warner commu-

Edmund, Chief of Police Warner commu-

Edmund, Chief of Police Warner commu-

Edmund, Chief of Police Warner commu-

Edmund, Chief of Police Warner commu-

Edmund, Chief of Police Warner commu-

Edmund, Chief of Police Warner commu-

Edmund, Chief of Police Warner commu-

Edmund, Chief of Police Warner commu-

MOTHER MAINTAINS ONLY ONE CHILD.

Court Rules That Divorced Woman
Must Yield the Boy or Girl to Her Former Husband.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

New York, Dec. 25.—Never was a young mother placed in such a trying position as that in which Mrs. Elbridge Gerry Snow, Jr., finds herself to-day. In the straightening out of her marriage troubles, she has brought up a problem before the courts which all her other troubles seem as nothing.

In a little over three months she has got to choose between her little son, Elbridge Gerry, and her wife, Mrs. Snow, Jr., who is now in the hands of the courts.

That is the stern decree of a stern court to which Mrs. Snow, in her distress over her domestic troubles, rushed for release. Young, beautiful and rich, this young mother sits to-day in her splendid apartments in La Rochelle, No. 57 West Seventy-fifth street, with her children playing at her feet and wonders if it was worth while.

She has brought into her life an even greater misery than that which she was enduring before, and there is only one way out of it—she must choose between her son and her wife.

Reconciliation with her husband, after all that has passed, is not possible, say the friends of both, yet no other way is this crisis in her life to be overcome.

Says the order of the unsentimental court: Mrs. Snow may have one of the children, her husband the other. Mrs. Snow has until March 5, 1904, to choose which child she shall keep. If she does not choose by that time, Mr. Snow may, on March 7, 1904, take which child he pleases, leaving the other to the mother. It yields two or three times a week and once a month may be the child's home with the mother. In the event of the death of either parent, the surviving parent shall have both children, and $5,000 counsel fee. Either party may marry after March 5.

That is the stern decree of a stern court to which Mrs. Snow, in her distress over her domestic troubles, rushed for release. Young, beautiful and rich, this young mother sits to-day in her splendid apartments in La Rochelle, No. 57 West Seventy-fifth street, with her children playing at her feet and wonders if it was worth while.

She has brought into her life an even greater misery than that which she was enduring before, and there is only one way out of it—she must choose between her son and her wife.

Reconciliation with her husband, after all that has passed, is not possible, say the friends of both, yet no other way is this crisis in her life to be overcome.

Says the order of the unsentimental court: Mrs. Snow may have one of the children, her husband the other. Mrs. Snow has until March 5, 1904, to choose which child she shall keep. If she does not choose by that time, Mr. Snow may, on March 7, 1904, take which child he pleases, leaving the other to the mother. It yields two or three times a week and once a month may be the child's home with the mother. In the event of the death of either parent, the surviving parent shall have both children, and $5,000 counsel fee. Either party may marry after March 5.

That is the stern decree of a stern court to which Mrs. Snow, in her distress over her domestic troubles, rushed for release. Young, beautiful and rich, this young mother sits to-day in her splendid apartments in La Rochelle, No. 57 West Seventy-fifth street, with her children playing at her feet and wonders if it was worth while.

She has brought into her life an even greater misery than that which she was enduring before, and there is only one way out of it—she must choose between her son and her wife.

Reconciliation with her husband, after all that has passed, is not possible, say the friends of both, yet no other way is this crisis in her life to be overcome.

Says the order of the unsentimental court: Mrs. Snow may have one of the children, her husband the other. Mrs. Snow has until March 5, 1904, to choose which child she shall keep. If she does not choose by that time, Mr. Snow may, on March 7, 1904, take which child he pleases, leaving the other to the mother. It yields two or three times a week and once a month may be the child's home with the mother. In the event of the death of either parent, the surviving parent shall have both children, and $5,000 counsel fee. Either party may marry after March 5.

That is the stern decree of a stern court to which Mrs. Snow, in her distress over her domestic troubles, rushed for release. Young, beautiful and rich, this young mother sits to-day in her splendid apartments in La Rochelle, No. 57 West Seventy-fifth street, with her children playing at her feet and wonders if it was worth while.

She has brought into her life an even greater misery than that which she was enduring before, and there is only one way out of it—she must choose between her son and her wife.

Reconciliation with her husband, after all that has passed, is not possible, say the friends of both, yet no other way is this crisis in her life to be overcome.

Says the order of the unsentimental court: Mrs. Snow may have one of the children, her husband the other. Mrs. Snow has until March 5, 1904, to choose which child she shall keep. If she does not choose by that time, Mr. Snow may, on March 7, 1904, take which child he pleases, leaving the other to the mother. It yields two or three times a week and once a month may be the child's home with the mother. In the event of the death of either parent, the surviving parent shall have both children, and $5,000 counsel fee. Either party may marry after March 5.

That is the stern decree of a stern court to which Mrs. Snow, in her distress over her domestic troubles, rushed for release. Young, beautiful and rich, this young mother sits to-day in her splendid apartments in La Rochelle, No. 57 West Seventy-fifth street, with her children playing at her feet and wonders if it was worth while.

She has brought into her life an even greater misery than that which she was enduring before, and there is only one way out of it—she must choose between her son and her wife.

Reconciliation with her husband, after all that has passed, is not possible, say the friends of both, yet no other way is this crisis in her life to be overcome.

Says the order of the unsentimental court: Mrs. Snow may have one of the children, her husband the other. Mrs. Snow has until March 5, 1904, to choose which child she shall keep. If she does not choose by that time, Mr. Snow may, on March 7, 1904, take which child he pleases, leaving the other to the mother. It yields two or three times a week and once a month may be the child's home with the mother. In the event of the death of either parent, the surviving parent shall have both children, and $5,000 counsel fee. Either party may marry after March 5.

That is the stern decree of a stern court to which Mrs. Snow, in her distress over her domestic troubles, rushed for release. Young, beautiful and rich, this young mother sits to-day in her splendid apartments in La Rochelle, No. 57 West Seventy-fifth street, with her children playing at her feet and wonders if it was worth while.

She has brought into her life an even greater misery than that which she was enduring before, and there is only one way out of it—she must choose between her son and her wife.

Reconciliation with her husband, after all that has passed, is not possible, say the friends of both, yet no other way is this crisis in her life to be overcome.

Says the order of the unsentimental court: Mrs. Snow may have one of the children, her husband the other. Mrs. Snow has until March 5, 1904, to choose which child she shall keep. If she does not choose by that time, Mr. Snow may, on March 7, 1904, take which child he pleases, leaving the other to the mother. It yields two or three times a week and once a month may be the child's home with the mother. In the event of the death of either parent, the surviving parent shall have both children, and $5,000 counsel fee. Either party may marry after March 5.

That is the stern decree of a stern court to which Mrs. Snow, in her distress over her domestic troubles, rushed for release. Young, beautiful and rich, this young mother sits to-day in her splendid apartments in La Rochelle, No. 57 West Seventy-fifth street, with her children playing at her feet and wonders if it was worth while.

She has brought into her life an even greater misery than that which she was enduring before, and there is only one way out of it—she must choose between her son and her wife.

Reconciliation with her husband, after all that has passed, is not possible, say the friends of both, yet no other way is this crisis in her life to be overcome.

Says the order of the unsentimental court: Mrs. Snow may have one of the children, her husband the other. Mrs. Snow has until March 5, 1904, to choose which child she shall keep. If she does not choose by that time, Mr. Snow may, on March 7, 1904, take which child he pleases, leaving the other to the mother. It yields two or three times a week and once a month may be the child's home with the mother. In the event of the death of either parent, the surviving parent shall have both children, and $5,000 counsel fee. Either party may marry after March 5.

That is the stern decree of a stern court to which Mrs. Snow, in her distress over her domestic troubles, rushed for release. Young, beautiful and rich, this young mother sits to-day in her splendid apartments in La Rochelle, No. 57 West Seventy-fifth street, with her children playing at her feet and wonders if it was worth while.

She has brought into her life an even greater misery than that which she was enduring before, and there is only one way out of it—she must choose between her son and her wife.

Reconciliation with her husband, after all that has passed, is not possible, say the friends of both, yet no other way is this crisis in her life to be overcome.

Says the order of the unsentimental court: Mrs. Snow may have one of the children, her husband the other. Mrs. Snow has until March 5, 1904, to choose which child she shall keep. If she does not choose by that time, Mr. Snow may, on March 7, 1904, take which child he pleases, leaving the other to the mother. It yields two or three times a week and once a month may be the child's home with the mother. In the event of the death of either parent, the surviving parent shall have both children, and $5,000 counsel fee. Either party may marry after March 5.

That is the stern decree of a stern court to which Mrs. Snow, in her distress over her domestic troubles, rushed for release. Young, beautiful and rich, this young mother sits to-day in her splendid apartments in La Rochelle, No. 57 West Seventy-fifth street, with her children playing at her feet and wonders if it was worth while.

She has brought into her life an even greater misery than that which she was enduring before, and there is only one way out of it—she must choose between her son and her wife.

Reconciliation with her husband, after all that has passed, is not possible, say the friends of both, yet no other way is this crisis in her life to be overcome.

Says the order of the unsentimental court: Mrs. Snow may have one of the children, her husband the other. Mrs. Snow has until March 5, 1904, to choose which child she shall keep. If she does not choose by that time, Mr. Snow may, on March 7, 1904, take which child he pleases, leaving the other to the mother. It yields two or three times a week and once a month may be the child's home with the mother. In the event of the death of either parent, the surviving parent shall have both children, and $5,000 counsel fee. Either party may marry after March 5.

That is the stern decree of a stern court to which Mrs. Snow, in her distress over her domestic troubles, rushed for release. Young, beautiful and rich, this young mother sits to-day in her splendid apartments in La Rochelle, No. 57 West Seventy-fifth street, with her children playing at her feet and wonders if it was worth while.

CHRISTMAS AT THE C. & O.

All State Business Is Suspended for the Day.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.